

Doina Ivan, MD

Associate Professor of Pathology and Dermatology at MD Anderson Cancer Center, Houston, Texas, USA.

Dr. Doina Ivan received her medical degree from “University of Medicine Carol Davila” in Bucharest, Romania. She completed and graduated pathology residency-training program at University of Texas, Houston where was awarded with Helen Chu Wagner Excellence Award for Best Resident in Pathology. She joined the faculty Dermatopathology section at MD Anderson in 2006, upon completion of two fellowships in Surgical Pathology and Dermatopathology at MD Anderson Cancer Center .Dr. Ivan is the director of the Dermatopathology Fellowship at MD Anderson Cancer Center. She is a very passionate teacher and has coordinated and directed numerous courses and seminars for medical students, residents, and practicing pathologists in national and international societies. She is an active member and serves in the Executive Committee of the International Society of Dermatopathology. Her research interests include cutaneous adnexal tumors, cutaneous lymphomas, and melanoma. She has authored/co-authored numerous publications and book chapters, especially in the area of cutaneous adnexal neoplasms.